Terry Thormin is a keen naturalist who managed to translate his passion into a day job, first working for a private ecological consulting company doing bird work, then working for the Royal Alberta Museum for 23 years in the invertebrate zoology program.

Now retired, he is able to pursue his passion for nature and nature photography full time. Since moving to Vancouver Island in 2009 he has built up an impressive portfolio of photographs of everything from mushrooms and insects to orcas and grizzly bears. His photographs have appeared in numerous books and magazines and are being used in signage for nature parks across North America.
